

Angela Gest-McCall
Consultant Partner
Netherlands

Angela is a Leadership Development Consultant, sparring partner, connector and results-oriented Executive Coach with over 20 years' experience. She partners with senior leaders and their teams in large, complex global organisations to develop mindsets, unleash potential and create the cultural conditions needed to accelerate performance, innovation and growth. She believes passionately that the best leaders put people first and that with the right support, we can reveal the leadership capability that invites people to go beyond what they thought was possible and unleash untapped potential.

Combining strong strategic and business acumen with deep listening and a keen sense of intuition, Angela is able to quickly connect with people to ask thought-provoking questions that gently challenge current thinking and encourage new perspectives. She has held a number of regional and global HR Leadership roles in the IT, Healthcare and Media industries. This brings a depth of experience in achieving large-scale change during turbulent and uncertain times. She is passionate about developing cultures that inspire commitment, sustainable performance and successful business outcomes.

Angela coaches leaders and teams in global corporations and non-profit organisations, in addition to a select group of entrepreneurs. She works with people from various different cultures around the world to co-create high impact coaching experiences that deliver valued outcomes for individuals, teams and organisations. Clients value her partnership in delivering strong leadership development experiences that accelerate critical transitions, strengthen teams and transform managers into leaders. Angela knows that lasting change starts at the individual level and uses assessments, experiential learning and business application to develop self-awareness, personal resilience, influencing and coaching skills. She continues to explore research in the field of neuroscience and its practical applications to individual and organisational change.

A visionary and thought-provoking leader, Angela combines the best aspects of British diplomacy and Dutch practicality to challenge individuals and teams to recognise their own unique characteristics and talents to optimise their potential and capacity to become the best version of themselves. She has extensive experience of leading development initiatives with culturally diverse groups in both face-to-face and virtual settings, and coaching people from various different cultures around the world. She speaks English, Dutch and German.
