

Linda Hall
Consultant Partner
United States

Linda's career as an executive coach and organisational consultant spans more than 20 years. She has worked with executives and teams at all levels and in diverse functions within financial, healthcare, government, high tech, architecture, pharmaceutical, retail, professional services, non-profit, entertainment and publishing organisations as they grow in their ability to lead and have increasing impact.

Linda brings bottom-line executive experience at the CEO, President and Vice President levels to her work. She is one of the first coaches credentialed as a Master Coach by the International Coaching Federation, is a graduate of Coach University and is an Adjunct with the Center for Creative Leadership. She also holds a masters in business from the University of Wisconsin and a masters certificate in Organisational Development from New School University in New York.

Diverse clients served include executives from Coca Cola, Merck, Spotify, JP Morgan Chase, Barclays, Cisco, Oracle, Chanel, US Treasury, Pfizer, Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, International Women's Media Foundation, Skidmore Owens and Merrill Architects, American Brain Foundation, US Patents and Trademarks, and many others.

Linda partners with clients as they master leadership skills and the tools they need to envision, shape, innovate, communicate and take action as leaders masterfully. Her approach in each assignment involves creating a relationship with her client, assessing their leadership strengths and needs, jointly setting measurable goals, and facilitating clarity and action to unlock the power within. Clients value her humour, insight, straight talk, well-researched methods and ability to help clients apply what they learn immediately in real time.

Linda lives in New Jersey near New York City and enjoys works with clients virtually and face to face around the world.
