

Maureen Obatomi Consultant Partner UK

Maureen is a leadership development consultant, executive coach, and facilitator. She has a diverse background and extensive global expertise in delivering and implementing leadership, career, and organisational development programmes in both the private and public sectors. She is also experienced at coaching at all organisational levels and functions, and her client portfolio includes working with leaders from companies like American Express, AstraZeneca, Marks & Spencer, JPMorgan, Toyota, and Sky.

Maureen's professional background includes working as a clinical pharmacist and senior leader in the healthcare industry before transitioning into learning and development and working as an embedded coach and trainer for an Australian not-for-profit organisation. She presently works in the UK as a leadership and talent development consultant, where she specialises in performance management, vision and strategy development, leading and developing teams, and career development.

Her expertise is in cultural transformation and supporting the adoption of transformative capabilities across an organisation's workforce. She is skilled at bridging the gap between individual and organisational expectations by empowering individuals and teams to find solutions that match their strengths, talents, and values with organisational needs.

Maureen is deeply committed to helping people reach their full potential and providing leaders and teams with the self-awareness, mindset, skills, and leadership practises required to positively transform behaviours and create meaningful and sustainable culture change. She is motivated by the belief that everyone has the potential for brilliance and great leadership, and she believes in the power of relationships and conversation to stimulate new thinking and change.

As a coach, she takes pride in being described as insightful, action-oriented, and highly personable. Her coaching style reflects her genuine, supportive, and tenacious nature; she brings a unique blend of deep reflection, creative exploration, and positive challenge to her work as a coach and is frequently described as warm and engaging with the ability to stimulate great clarity and decisive action.

Her diverse background enables her to bring a wealth of experience and insight to her client sessions. Her work with a wide range of leaders from various life and career experiences enables her to effortlessly relate to leaders at all levels in a way that allows them to grow and thrive as their authentic selves. Her work in organisational strategic and cultural development enables her to easily understand the business challenges that leaders face.

She is also an EMCC Accredited Coach Practitioner, a licensed Strengthscope Practitioner, qualified to BPS Psychometric Testing Levels A and B and Saville Consulting Aptitude & Wave Assessments. She has a master's degree in Pharmacy and is also a registered member with the Association for Business Psychology (ABP).
